FOREWORD

FICCI believes that solar energy can play a pivotal role in enhancing India's energy security and creating greater energy access. This can only happen if an ecosystem can be built and made to thrive in the country. Keeping this in mind, it is important that all stakeholders gain access to information about the existing dynamics of the sector and the market players. It therefore, gives me immense pleasure to present the Indian Solar Handbook and Directory, a compendium that would act as a reference point for information on the policy and institutional framework for solar energy in India and the stakeholders involved in the Indian Solar Energy space. This will be a one-point source for end-user industries, multilateral and bilateral agencies, financial institutions, and other stakeholders who want to build understanding of and linkages with the sector. It would in turn facilitate outreach of Indian expertise in the field of solar energy and enhance the domestic and international business opportunities and collaborations for the solar companies based in India.

The Handbook part of this compendium features information on the solar market, central and state government policies, regulatory overview, nodal agencies, as well as case studies highlighting the successful stories of applications in this space. The Directory part provides information on Equipment Manufacturers, Project Developers, System Integrators, Sales and Marketing companies, and Energy Service Companies in the field of Solar Energy. The Indian Solar Directory is also expected to provide basic information to new entrants and be one of the most effective and efficient tool to promote and market the Solar products /services/technologies among the Indian and International Solar Industry as well as the end-users.

I would like to thank all the participating organizations for enlisting/advertising your esteemed organization in the Directory. I would also like to acknowledge the FICCI Solar Energy Task Force for their valuable suggestions that helped us initiate this compendium. FICCI would ensure that the Handbook and Directory is widely promoted through its extensive networks in India and abroad. We are confident that the Indian and Global industry will find this compendium useful.
