India, US make 'progress' for joint trade-oil deal as talks move forward
India and the US are negotiating a comprehensive resolution that addresses both the pending issues in their trade deal and Washington's concerns over New Delhi's continued purchase of Russian oil. "We want to address it comprehensively rather than piece by piece. There has to be some sort of agreement at the higher levels to President Donald Trump's satisfaction that we have a way forward to ultimately reduce and eliminate India's Russian oil purchases. The oil issue is the thorniest.
