Symposium on Coal Gasification

FICCI, Federation House
1 Tansen Marg, New Delhi
7th July, 2015

Indian Chemical industry is a critical part of the Indian economy, with key linkages to various segments of industry. India is currently challenged due to inadequate availability of feedstock and building blocks in comparison to the competing countries blessed with oil and gas resources. India imports much of its feedstock, which poses a huge imbalance in ability to sustain growth, given the limitation of resources in a growing economy. There is a need to aggressively pursue alternate sources like coal, pet coke and bio-mass. China has developed a strong base of coal-based chemical industry and is vigorously pursuing research work in coal based chemistry. India, with its large deposit of coal can pursue a similar strategy, where proven technologies for coal based synfuels and chemicals are already commercially available.

To bring a focus to the potential of Coal gasification in India, FICCI jointly with the Department of C&PC, Government of India is organizing a Symposium on 7th July, 2015.

Topics for Discussion

1. Potential and Opportunities of coal Gasification in India.
2. Coal to Chemicals Opportunities.
3. Coal as a chemicals feedstock - experience of China.
4. Coal to petrochemicals developments in China and lessons for India.
5. Potential of coal bed methane and allied activities.
6. India specific developments in the sector.

Target Audience
